

March 2020

Dear Healthcare Professional:

First and foremost, Verastem Oncology, recognizes that our friends and colleagues in the health professions are deeply affected by the current COVID-19 pandemic. We thank you for your dedication and continued service to educate and treat patients during a very challenging time. Our top priority is the safety and well-being of the global health care community we serve, which includes health care professionals, patients, and caregivers. We would like to share the action steps Verastem Oncology is taking to support these individuals and our employees.

Importantly, we assure you that our medicine remains readily available through all standard channels. At this time, we do not anticipate any shortages to supply or disruption to supply chain. We will continue to monitor our supply and raw materials and we will provide information to you as quickly as possible.

We desire for all healthcare professionals to be able to continue to care for patients and caregivers, including those impacted by COVID-19. As a result, as of March 12, 2020, all of our field medical liaisons, clinical nurse liaisons, local key account directors, and value/access teams have been instructed to stay engaged with you virtually whenever possible. We will continue to have in person meetings at your request or where it is business critical.

In addition, to aid in reducing the spread of the COVID-19 virus, as of March 12, all home office employees have been working remotely and eliminating unnecessary travels. We have the technology to continue to monitor drug supply and address your questions regarding our product or trial related activities.

We appreciate all you are doing on the frontlines to care for your patients and communities. We appreciate your partnership in caring for those impacted by the COVID-19 virus pandemic.

You can reach out to your local representative or liaison for questions or contact Medical Information at 1-877-7RX-VSTM (877-779-8786). For patient assistance, please contact Verastem Cares at 1-833-570-CARE (2273).

Sincerely,
